Bob Moriarty of 321 Gold is now a full-fledged author with two published books in 2016. This book about war with a title about peace is an autobiography of his adventures and misadventures as a gung-ho Marine Corp pilot during the Vietnam War.

Bob’s book brought back memories of growing up with news of America’s first unwinnable war assaulting our common senses on a nightly basis. He presents detailed anecdotes of jobs and journeys thru five years in the Marines, the dysfunctional US military, horrors of the war, and inefficacy of fighting a people simply defending their turf for the right to determine their own future.

Bob being Bob, he also treats us to regular doses of digressions and diatribes on the US military-industrial complex, the present state of our military forces, and the endless, unwinnable wars that our “esteemed leaders” continue to create and fight at home and all over the world.

As with many that served, Bob reflects on his changing attitude that ultimately led him to come home, grow long hair, go to college, and maybe smoke a little dope with his ex-Marine buddies. He finally cut off the ponytail a few years back.

In the book, Bob presents himself as a warrior but in my opinion, this shows him to be the rebel with a cause that we all know from other writings.

“The Art of Peace” is a very entertaining read; here’s the link on Amazon.

Ciao for now,
