Difficult times in the junior resource sector over the past three years have presented me challenges to find new companies that meet my strict criteria for newsletter coverage. These criteria include a tightly-held share structure, experienced and successful management, meritorious projects in favorable geological and geopolitical jurisdictions, and cash at hand or the ability to raise funds without incurring substantial dilution.

For this reason, I spent the past month in Vancouver and Hong Kong ferreting out new resource sector opportunities that are undervalued with potential near-term upside.

Today, I am happy to report to you as a loyal subscriber of MercenaryGeologist.com that I have chosen two new website sponsors.

In my opinion, uranium remains the best contrarian play in commodities space. I have initiated coverage on [CanAlaska Uranium Ltd \(CVV.V\)](http://CanAlaska Uranium Ltd (CVV.V)), a prospect generator with early to advanced stage properties in the Athabasca Basin, the world's premier uranium province. CanAlaska's current partners include a Korean consortium, Mitsubishi, Makena Resources, Northern Uranium, and the Fond de Lac Denesuline Nation. It also holds 14 uranium and 11 diamond properties that are currently available for option, purchase, or joint venture.

Gold always has driven the junior resource market and Nevada is undoubtedly the world's best place to find a giant gold mine. I have chosen a company with a discovery that, in my opinion, has the geological potential to become Nevada's next big deposit. [Nevada Sunrise Gold Corporation \(NEV.V\)](http://Nevada Sunrise Gold Corporation (NEV.V)) is a junior gold exploration company with Nevada projects that include the aforementioned Kinsley Mountain discovery with joint venture partner Pilot Gold, Golden Arrow with a qualified resource in the Walker Lane, and an early-stage prospect.

I will post full-fledged Mercenary Alerts on these two companies in the near future. In the interim, I kindly remind that you that this Mercenary Alert is for subscribers' eyes only, and thank you in advance for respecting this caveat.

Ciao for now,

Mickey Fulp
